Evansville, Ind., Oct. 11.-President McKinley and his Cabinet came from Chicago this morning to attend the National Reunion of the Blue and the Gray A heavy rain was falling, but despite this ten thousand veterans and visitors thronged about the railroad station, and the men in gray vied with those in blue in the evation when the Presidential party arrived. They swarmed about the President and Cabinet officers, cheering and extending their hands for a grasp of welcome. At the same time a Presidential salute of twenty-one guns boomed from Camp Farragut, at the Tristate Fair Grounds. This was the signal for whistles and bells throughout the city to join in.

Owing to the short stay of the President the party was at once escorted by the Cleveland Grays and Reception Committee to the fair the following brief remarks: grounds, where President McKiniey delivered an

The best men of the South came—the sons of old Confederate soldlers. The best of the North came—the sons of the old members of the Grand Army of the Republic. All came together in heart and hand to follow the flag of their country wherever it might lead. We have been reconciled—more than reconciled—for our reconciliation has been baptized in the best blood of the reconcilers of our below of country. If a both sections of our beloved country. If a Northern soldier put the flag up at Santiago, a Southern soldier, the gallant Brumby, of Georgia put it up over Manila. It rests with Georgia, put it up over Manila. It rests with us to look to the future, putting the past behind us. And this Government depends upon the patriotism of the country. North and South, to stand by the purposes of the Government and follow in the pathway of its destiny.

I am glad to meet and greet you. We come together, not as we came a third of a century ago, with arms in our hands, but we come with love for each other in our hearts.

We appreciate this welcome from the great Sate of Indiana. It is appropriate to-day that we turn back to review the gallant deeds of those who on land and sea have upheld the cause that was nearest their hearts. It was the inevitable decree of Providence that this land should exist as one and not become a divided country. The valor that inspired the men of the North and South is a common heritsace of pride to all the land. People sometimes deplore war, and speak of peace conferences as of they could blot out of the soul of man all love of gallantry, all admiration for heroic deeds.

You may declare and resolve to the end of the world, my friends, but longest and last in the

our country is assalled, when our honor is fingly, because the private recedit is good, prosperthat is justly theirs.

My Fellow Citizens: I have been very greatly pleased as I have journeyed through your State with what I have seen and heard—the evidences of good feeling and of cheerfulness on the part a mer of good feeling and of cheerfulness on the part of the people and of prosperity in your fields and your workshops. It gave me much satisfaction to give greeting to me soldiers who fought against each other from 1861 to 1865, at the great reunion in the city of Evansville. There I saw the Blue and the Gray vying with each other in expressions of love of country and devotion to the flag. I saw also many of the young soldiers of the Spanish war furnished by the State of Indiana, and I therefore saw not only the patriotism of 1861, but I saw the patriotism of 1808.

It gave me great pleasure also as I approached your city to see the workingmen from your great mills all out in line, in sight of the train, to extend me greeting and welcome. And not the least of the pleasure of coming to Terre Haute is to meet and greet my old and valued friend, the veteran patriot and statesman, the henored citizen of your own city, Richard W.

(Great applause)

My Fellow Citizens: It gives me very great pleasure to participate with you, men of the North and men of the South, in this glad reunion of hearts. We are already unified; the peace which Grant and Lee made at Appornative has been kept, not by law or restraint, but by love and fraternal regard. The Union to-day rests not on force, which may fail, but rests in the hearts of the people, a union that never can be severed.

If I have been permitted in the slightest degree to help in the work of reconciliation and unification, I will esteem it the greatest honor of my life. When I made the call for troops to prosecute the Spanish war, men from the North and South, without regard to political belief or religious creed, railied to the standard of the Union.

The best men of the South came—the sons of the Department. (Great applause.)

I wish I could do him some special honor. If I had known that the heavens were to open and the waters pour down this morning I would have ordered a battleship here to bring him from his home to the station and take him back. (Long continued applause.) I am sure that, being a good Indianian, he would have commanded it just as well as he administered the Department. (Great applause.)

Englishmen were not meking any recommendations in regard to the Philippines, the speaker went on to say, and he thought it unlikely that the Americans would offer any recommendations about the Transvaal. In discussing his favorite theme, the "open door" in China, Lord Charles declared that the wealth of China open to development by Englishmen and Americans was so tast that it might be said that the surface had not even been scratched. If Great Britain and the United States would work together, as continued, there would be no doubt about the "open door," and there would be no doubt about peace. He did not recommend an alliance of bayonets and bullets, but urged a commer fal alliance.

After Lord Charles had finished speaking the members of the Exchange gave him three rousing cheers and shouted in concert, "Well done, Condor," the words of the message signalled from the British flagship after the daring exploit of the gunbeat Condor, then under Lord Charles's command, in the bombardment of Alexandria.
